LDS leaders urge rejoicing

SALT LAKE CITY — The First Presidency of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints Saturday issued a Thanksgiving message encouraging people throughout the world to rejoice in "the numerous and bountiful blessings we receive from our Father in Heaven."

"With so much of political and religious turmoil in the world, we pray for efforts to establish peace. We rejoice in the freedom enjoyed by many throughout the world and hope for that blessing for all mankind," said a prepared statement signed by church President Spencer W. Kimball and his counselors, N. Eldon Tanner, Marion G. Romney and Gordon B. Hinckley.

The statement urged people to express thanks not only for material blessings, but for the freedom of worship. It said that thankfulness can be best expressed through faithfulness to religious principles.

Spanish Fascists hold rally

MADRID — Almost 300 Spaniards, offering the fascist salute and cheering the leader of last February's failed right-wing coup, packed a square in front of the Royal Palace Sunday to mark the sixth anniversary of the death of dictator Gen. Francisco Franco.

Rally organizers, emboldened by a spate of rumors in recent days predicting another coup attempt, called the turnout the biggest since Franco, Spain's iron-fisted ruler for 36 years, died on Aug. 20, 1975.

The military right-wingers defied a government order prohibiting the use of military uniforms and the Spanish flag at military rallies.

Brezhnev in West Germany

BONN, West Germany — Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev arrived here Sunday for his first visit to West Germany in two years. Chancellor Helmut Schmidt was at the airport to welcome the Soviet leader and top level Kremlin officials and joined the motorcade that bypassed the site of anti-Soviet and protest protests.

Brezhnev and his party, which arrived just after 7 p.m. — 1 p.m. EDT — at Bonn-Cologne airport, was ringed by hundreds of armed guards.

The ailing Soviet leader, who will turn 75 next month, moved carefully with short steps as he descended the aircraft, jelliner's steps to meet Schmidt and West German Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher. At one point he almost lost balance and was grabbed by a Soviet military officer.

Officials doubt Allen's guilt

WASHINGTON — Justice Department officials said that national security adviser Richard V. Allen received $10,000 instead of $1,000 from two Japanese journalists, but that investigation is still being investigated, it has been learned.

Meantime, presidential counselor Edwin Meese II said Sunday, "I don't see any plan at the present time for Mr. Allen to leave the White House" as a result of receiving the money as an expression of the two journalists' gratitude for obtaining a Jan. 21 interview with first lady Nancy Reagan.

"Until and unless there's some adverse information that comes to light, I think the situation will remain as it is," Meese said on CBS-TV's "Face the Nation" program.

Reagan to veto spending bill

WASHINGTON — President Reagan, in a confrontation with Congress over his austerity campaign, vowed Sunday to veto a compromise spending bill designed to end the federal government's two-day insolvency.

The bill, which would have authorized the government to spend the money, was passed by the House, but the Senate, on the measure. On a vote of 215-184, the House turned back a GOP-led move to pull the bill from the House floor. And on a vote of 205-184, House members gave preliminary approval to the compromise, although several hours of debate were possible before the measure could be sent to the Senate.

U.S. split on PATCO issue

NEW YORK — Americans are split on whether the federal government should rehire the fired air traffic controllers, according to the latest Associated Press-NBC News poll.

Forty percent of all respondents said the government should rehire the controllers, 47 percent said they should not be rehired, 6 percent said some of them should be rehired and 7 percent were not sure.

The poll, of 1,602 adults telephoned Nov. 16-17 in a statistically sound random sampling, also said only 1 in 4 believes air travel is less safe than it was before the controller's strike.

Solidarity meeting upset

WARSAW, Poland — Police broke up a meeting of anti-government activists and Solidarity union members Sunday in the apartment of leading dissident Jacek Kuron, the state news agency PAF said.

Solidarity and dissident sources said several dozen people attended the meeting, including regional officials of the independent union. Police searched the three-room apartment and issued a summons to Kuron, but made no arrests.

The Interior Ministry said the participants intended to found a political group called "Club of Self-governed Citizens — Liberty, Justice, Independence," PAF said.

Others join in peace efforts

JERUSALEM — Four European nations will announce Monday they will participate in the U.S.-sponsored peacekeeping force that is to patrol the Sinai peninsula after Israel returns it to Egypt, a Foreign Ministry spokesman said Sunday.

Spokesmen for the French and British governments confirmed in Paris and London that statements will be issued by their governments, but they would not provide any details. The Netherlands and Italy are the other countries reported ready to announce.

Stadium ground broken in Saturday ceremony: '82 completion date set

PROVO (AP) — Groundbreaking ceremonies for an expanded BYU football stadium were held Saturday after the Utah-BYU football game.

School officials said the total expansion, estimated to cost $12 million, will increase seating capacity from 35,000 to 55,000. The project is scheduled to be completed before the start of the 1982 football season.

Only part of the proposed expansion will be completed if donated funds do not reach the $12 million mark.

mental abuse

Children affected by parents

By JULIE POTTER
Staff Writer

"Put that apple back! I never thought I'd have to deal with a thief for a child. Now come on before they throw us out of the store."

Karen's mother ranks her arm as she pulls Karen down the grocery store aisle.

"But Mom, I was just looking at it," the tears welling up in her 8-year-old eyes.

Cruel verbal battles are but one of the many types of mental abuse children experience, said Dr. A. Lynn Scorsby, an associate professor of family sciences with an emphasis on child development at BYU. He said such abuse can destroy a child's self-image and hinder the development of his stable identity. Scorsby said a child believes people's actions toward him are a reflection of what he is like. When an adult assigns a negative label to a child, the child believes he is bad.

Mental abuse
There are several kinds of mental abuse. Scorsby said: withdrawal of love as a means of punishment; neglect and indifference; constant criticism; pessimism about a child's success; ridicule and demeaning of children's ideas; and a constant focus on a child's performance rather than his or her feelings. Scorsby said abusive elements show up in every family, but frequency and intensity determine the effect on the child.

The abusive elements "are pervasive in our society," he said. "There is far less nurturing than condemning."

Inconsistencies
There is a pattern in many families where one parent is ineffective while the other is very competent, he said. Usually the female is the parent who meets most of the child's needs. The other parent is often indulgent in order to gain affection from the child. The child will play one parent against the other in this situation.

In this situation, Scorsby said, this pattern can cause the child to grow into an irresponsible adult, he said. For example, Tom, a 22-year-old, asked his father to co-sign a loan for him. The father did sign, but the young man had no intention of trying to repay the loan. The indulgent parent paid for the loan instead, making the son take the responsibility for payment, Scorsby said. This is a form of mental abuse.

Mental abuse also affects schoolwork, he said. When parents are unable to deal with stress, they sometimes tend to take their anger out on the child, Scorsby said. As a result, the child refuses to do hard work and does a lot of playing around. His grades fall to D's and F's.

A similar experience occurs when the parent transfers his own embarrassment to the child, Scorsby said.

When a 4-year-old said, "Mandy knocks a vase off the coffee table at the neighbor's house, the parent may become embarrassed and will criticize the child in public to transfer the embarrassment felt by the parent to the child, Scorsby said.

Parents should learn to master their own emotions instead of transferring them to their children, he said. "Not to squelch them, but to express them in appropriate limits."

Children experience many dire consequences as a result of mental abuse, Scorsby said.

Aggressive behavior
In some instances, the grown child will be immature emotionally and have childlike mannerisms and actions, he said. Boys tend to display aggressive behavior which manifests itself in the form of vandalism and delinquent actions. Scorsby said anti-social behavior is another result of mental abuse. If society says smoking is bad, the child will smoke, he said.

Children also may become too dependent on others as a result of mental abuse, Scorsby said. Because of this dependence, the grown children will often develop shallow relationships.

This reduces the probability of a successful marriage and family, he said.

In extreme cases of mental abuse, the child can develop psychosomatic illnesses, Scorsby said. Such illnesses as asthma, colitis and some allergies can be caused by mental abuse, he said.

Remains of third Ute found

The life of a third Ute is history. His remains were located on the Flying Cougars Club bulletin board located between the ELWC and the JBL.

Ron Hatcock, a junior in computer science from Birmingham, Ala., found the Ute after picking up The Daily Universe at 7:30 Friday morning as he came onto campus.

Hatcock narrowly edged out another bloodthirsty Cougar fan who arrived on the scene only seconds after Hatcock made the find.

The meaning of the term files confused me at first, Hatcock said. Hatcock is winner of five free dinners in the Cougar restaurant in exchange for the body of the dead Ute.

Minton said parents are often mistaken if they think their child is toilet trained at a young age, after the child is set on the toilet by his parents after every mealtime.

"It is not really a learned sequence for the child. If they (parents) put the pot there, they catch it (urine)," Minton said. "The child should not be noted as being bright because of it."

Francis said when a baby is pushed too hard to perform the way a mother would have him perform before he is able, it can cause the child to become tense, nervous and scared.

Man and the Snail — More Notes of a Frantic Life by Lewis Thomas, Boston: Houghton Mifflin, $2.95 (paperback)

Man and the Snail, a collection of short essays, is a fresh perspective sure to cheer cynical readers with its light humor and wisdom of biology for the layman.

Lewis Thomas, who also wrote "The reseeded markedly throughout his history on earth, Thomas points out that there still are many things man has little or no understanding of.

In a delightful satirical essay, Thomas presents his own form of therapy — Transcendental Metaphysics. He says TMW is a great discovery because it is the most natural and spontaneous of all human functions. It is time to acknowledge this, perhaps even to do it better.

Man is the only worrying animal, according to Thomas. Another feature setting humans apart from animals is the human ability to err. Thomas dispels the negative connotation of imperfection, in "To Err is Human." The ability to err places man above lower forms of life. He points out that he never saw a cat make a clumsy, wrong move. "Dogs are sometimes fallible, occasionally able to make charming minor mistakes, but they get this way by trying to mimic their masters," he writes.

If humans were incapable of error, they would not be able to be creative and to solve the many problems they worry about.

The essay, "How to Fix the Premedical Curriculum," may be of interest to those preparing for professional programs — pre-law, pre-med, pre-business, etc. Unfortunately, Thomas says, professional students concentrate only on their disciplines and they live only for their grades. These students, especially premed students, will take a humanities class only if they know the course may be taken without dropping in class standing.

This situation is not necessarily true in all cases. At BYU, with the General Education requirements, all students are forced to receive a somewhat "well-rounded" education. There are merits, however, in Thomas' proposed course of study, including Latin, Greek, English, history, the literature of at least two foreign languages, philosophy and the Classics.

"The Medusa and the Snail" is worth reading. Thomas makes scientific complexities, things most laymen would never bother with, readable and meaningful.

"Worrying is the most natural and spontaneous of all human functions. It is time to acknowledge this, perhaps even to do it better."

The author also served on the faculties of the University of Minnesota, New York University Medical Center and Yale Medical School. Thomas begins his thin volume by relating the parasitic medusa jellyfish and its host, a sea slug, to illustrate how all creatures depend on each other. Although many men feel insufficient, he says, in effect, that "no land."
